Editorial

Dear visitors,
dear readers,

Berlin's cultural landscape is defined by a one-of-a-kind artistic density and diversity. The independent performing arts play a big role in this: countless individual artists and groups develop their work across a wide range of contexts, languages and aesthetic forms. More than 100 performance venues and numerous rehearsal and production spaces are located all over the city. International festivals, professional events and exchange formats foster dialogue locally and beyond. New spaces, collaborations and initiatives make perspectives visible that have long been underrepresented, and – despite significant challenges – set their own artistic and structural impetuses. In this way, Berlin's independent performing arts community not only features an extraordinary range of artistic forms of expression, but also reflects the societal reality of a diverse city.

The Performing Arts Guide is intended for professionals and members of the community, especially those who are visiting the city. It offers a compact overview of the variety of Berlin's independent performing arts community. Alongside a comprehensive list of performance venues, the guide contains portraits of central festivals and get-togethers as well as information about platforms, initiatives, organizations and associations that contribute to its strengthening, networking and visibility. The Performing Arts Guide also exists as an online platform – featuring an up-to-date events calendar, an interactive map of the city and complete information about the performance venues.

Berlin's independent performing arts community is in a state of constant change – which means that this guide is as well. With this in mind, we are very appreciative of every piece of additional information that you would like to share with us.

We hope that the guide serves as a useful tool and wish you a wonderful time as you discover this vibrant community!

Take care,

Tubi Malcharzik, Catherine Launay and Gina Jeske
The Berlin Performing Arts Program

Festivals are the reflection of the independent performing arts. They present current artistic positions and offer space for relevant discourses. They provide the community with greater visibility and communicate its heterogeneity and diversity to a broad audience.

ADIRA Drag Festival

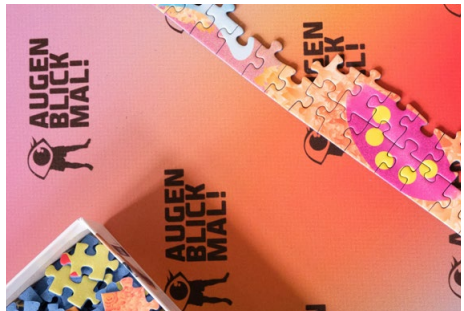

ADIRA Drag Festival celebrates Arab* and SWANA queer cultures across the East Mediterranean through drag, music, performance, and community-driven formats. The third edition of ADIRA will take place in 2026 under the theme "Mediterranean Divas": Artists from various backgrounds explore the diva as a shared symbol of resilience and glamour, while creating space for cross-cultural exchange and political expression. Festival International New Drama (FIND)

Schaubühne's search for new dramatic forms is inspired by a lively international exchange that consistently brings the theater and its ensemble into contact with other dramatic traditions. Every spring since 2000, FIND invites internationally renowned theater makers as well as numerous new discoveries to present their work at Schaubühne. Each year, the festival brings new theater from different language and cultural areas to Berlin for the first time and thus has developed over time into a panorama of the most notable productions from the field of international theater.

Monologfestival

Monologfestival at TD Berlin has been held biennially since 2007. For each edition, it co-produces up to ten new solo theater pieces centered on a socially and politically relevant theme. The new monologue productions and performances come together during the festival to form a multifaceted exploration of these themes. At the same time, the artists and collectives, with their diverse aesthetic styles, explore the full range of the monologue genre. Monologfestival presents autonomous individual statements that, without set design, are ideally suited for subsequent touring.

Knowledge from Experts Directly from the Community

Where do I find suitable networking events for my field, what industry events fit my interests? We, the Berlin Performing Arts Program, regularly organize networking events focused on current discourses, challenges, and goals of Berlin's independent arts community. Through a diverse range of offerings and individualized advisement sessions, we increase the visibility of artistic works, consolidate knowledge, create synergies, and initiate collaborations – both within the community and beyond. Our Freie Szene Kompass provides the perfect first introduction to Berlin's independent performing arts community – a digital reference guide covering funding programs, consultations, training, and much more.

Current funding opportunities, workshops, networking meetings and much more can be found on Kreativ Kultur Berlin, TanzRaumBerlin Netzwerk and Creative City Berlin. Anyone who is looking to inform themselves about cultural education can turn to Kubinaut. The project Touring Artists provides advisory services specifically for internationally active artists. Taking A Look Behind the Scenes Theaterscoutings Berlin offers guided tours through the venues and locations of Berlin's independent performing arts community. In collaboration with StattReisen Berlin, local experts provide behind-the-scenes insights. The monthly program also features audience discussions, workshops, open rehearsals, and much more.

Finding Spaces

The Rehearsal Space Platform offers a comprehensive and central overview of the spaces that are available in Berlin – regardless of whether they will be used for a new production, performance workshops or rehearsals. A list of suitable rehearsal spaces especially for dancers can be found on the website of Tanzbüro Berlin. Rental conditions and capacities must be requested directly from the providers.

Associations & Initiatives

Associations and initiatives play a fundamental role in the further development and growth of the independent performing arts community. They function as an advocacy group for the members of the community in politics. Amongst others, associations representing the interests of the respective disciplines include Bundesverband Zeitgenössischer Zirkus (BUZZ, the German Federal Association for Contemporary Circus), Zeitgenössischer Tanz Berlin e. V. (ZTB, the Berlin Contemporary Dance Association), Zeitgenössisches Musiktheater Berlin e. V. (ZMB, the Berlin Contemporary Music Theater Association), the Bundesverband Freie Darstellende Künste e. V. (Federal Association for the Independent Performing Arts) as well as LAFT Berlin – Landesverband Freie Darstellende Künste Berlin e. V. (the Berlin State Association for the Independent Performing Arts).

The Berliner Kulturkonferenz (Berlin Cultural Conference), the Rat für die Künste (Berlin's Artist Advisory Council) and the Koalition der Freien Szene Berlin (the Berlin Coalition of the Independent Arts) work interdisciplinarily as mediators between politics and cultural practice.

Diversity & Anti-Discrimination

The main point of contact for diversity work in Berlin's cultural sector is Diversity Arts Culture. Amongst other work, the team organizes antidiscrimination and empowerment workshops, advises cultural institutions and the Berlin Senate Department for Culture on questions of diversity and supports artists and cultural workers who experience exclusion in the cultural sector.

The pilot project FAIRSTAGE is dedicated to achieving good working conditions and a working environment at all publicly financed theaters in Berlin that is free from discrimination. Alongside the annual FAIRSTAGE conference, the project also organizes further education opportunities, publishes publications and hosts participation formats for the community.

The networking project Making a Difference promotes the self-determined work of disabled, Deaf and chronically ill artists in the field of dance. Residencies, co-productions, guest performances and the transfer of knowledge go hand-in-hand with peer-to-peer empowerment, awareness-raising and mediation formats.

Across Berlin, more than 100 independent venues and spaces present productions by the independent performing arts community. Some also offer residencies.
